CULROSS ISLAND AK

Why go all the way to Alaska to tele or tour ski? To show that "cross country" can still be part of cross country skiing. It seems these days the term "cross country" is missing from many XC skier's experience. Skiers get a very narrow view of what xc skiing can be and what the world has to offer when they never leave the same old groomed trail in their back yard, or when they never leave a city trail network, or when they spend year after year doing the same ski events. I like the Alaskan tourism license plate slogan: "See Alaska B4UDIE". So I say to fellow tour skiers: "Ski Alaska B4UDIE" This is a back country extreme trip for those who really want to get out into the remote mountains and ski runs that maybe no one has skied before. We will be flying to Anchorage where we board a train to Whittier, the port of call for our charter ferry that will take us to our own private island. There we will spend 4 days camping in a wood stove heated tent and skiing our island from peak to coast. This area has just about any kind of terrain imaginable for skiing. From gentle, rolling meadows for the skinny skier to technical ski mountaineering.

The average total snowfall in western Prince William Sound for the last 50 years is 247.1 inches, measured at sea level! The mountains, islands, coves, and fjords that make up the Sound make for some of the most spectacular ski and snow shoe terrain found anywhere in the world. No lifts, no helicopters, just some incredible skiing. We will also take a private tour of College Fjord on the way back to port. Provided: lodging, airfare, train, boat, heated tent/yurt, meals. Dates 2/22-29 Cost $1,539
