GLACIER & WHITEFISH MT.

Izaak Walton Inn in Montana has always been a neat destination for cross country skiing northern Montana with the train access from Seattle, but they have gotten so expensive lately that we haven't been there for almost ten years. With package rates approaching $500/day for two (without the train) I have been looking for alternatives for skiing this corner of Montana that didn't compromise on the convenience or experience. Last year at the Seattle Ski Show (a regular haunt for me) Grouse Mountain Lodge had a booth and a representative that was into cross county skiing :-). This is a golf course and country club during the summer but in the off season they were looking for alternatives to help keep the place open. The Lodge is located near the Whitefish train terminal and will pick us up from the station. They set tracks on the golf course and while this system is not very extensive, they are just down the road from Glacier Park and several other nordic trail systems. These locally accessible trail systems include Izaak Walton trails,. Glacier Nordic, Stilwater State Forest, Round Meadow (lighted) and others. If you want to do some downhill skiing while on the trip Big Sky (now named Whitefish Mountain Ski Resort) is just four miles up the road. The Lodge facilities include nicely appointed modern rooms, and on site dining room that is happy to fix a bag lunch if you want it. There is a gift shop, concierge service, a fitness center, indoor pool and sauna, and room service! All this for quite a bit less than the old train station up the road. Provided: train, lodging. Dates: 1/11-15. Cost $432
